

Making Free Trade Zones useful to agriculture

Policymakers across Africa are making efforts to provide the most conducive condition for the food industry to thrive. In the last 10 years, attention has been given to upgrading the agricultural transportation system, including the establishment of logistics and manufacturing clusters, to lift food production. President, Dr Adesina Akinwunmi noted that special economic zones are helping to grow the economies of many countries. "They have contributed exports worth $3.5 trillion, roughly 20 per cent of global trade in goods."

AEZO Webinar - Dr Amelia U. Santos-Paulino testimonial on "AfCFTA challenges & opportunities"

Dr Amelia U. Santos-Paulino, Chief of the Investment Issues & Analysis Section at UNCTAD, shared during the Africa Economic Zones Organization (AEZO) session at the AICE Conference, the opportunities and challenges of greater integration for African Special Economic Zones.

According to a recent UNCTAD survey of SEZ stakeholders in Africa carried out in collaboration with the African Economic Zones Organization, FDI in SEZs is expected to increase by 15 per cent from other members of AfCFTA and by 30 per cent from outside Africa. The survey revealed that the vast majority of African SEZs view the AfCFTA with optimism: over 85 percent of respondents expect FDI from Africa to increase or significantly increase, while almost the entirety of respondents (95 per cent) expect investment from outside Africa to do so. In the context of enhanced regional integration, international investors are likely to increasingly pursue regional market-seeking investments, considering African SEZs as points of entry into the whole continental market, therefore scaling up FDI towards the most competitive zones.

What are the opportunities for Africa's collaboration with other trading blocs that would support Special Economic Zones (SEZs) development across the continent ?

According to Dr Mike Pfister, Senior Economic Advisor at the OECD, SEZs are the main reason of the success of the AfCFTA. Trading blocs such as the AfCFTA and SEZs are playing a mutual role in helping each other. Since the intra-regional trades in Africa is already full of potential as it increases of about 14% each year, this type of agreement seems to be crucial to take the intra-regional trade to the next level.
